The law firm of Roetzel & Andress LPA is pleased to announce that Paul A. Giordano, a partner in the firm's Fort Myers office, is set to take over as Vice-Chairman of the Coastal Conservation Association of Florida (CCA) on February 1, 2015. Mr. Giordano currently serves as the CCA's President.

"I am greatly honored by the support of my fellow CCA members in allowing me this opportunity to continue to serve the Coastal Conservation Association Florida in a new role," said Mr. Giordano. "I look forward to seeing to it that CCA's initiatives continue to move forward to protect Florida's marine resources for the State's recreational anglers and divers."

The CCA has as its objective the conservation, promotion and enhancement of both the present and future availability of Florida's coastal resources for the benefit and enjoyment of the general public. Through broad-based recreational angler support; a strong legal and legislative presence; decades of experience; and an unwavering vision for the future of U.S. and global marine resources, CCA battles for the sustainable health of our coastal fisheries and for recreational anglers' interests.

Mr. Giordano handles a variety of business and commercial litigation, with a special focus on bankruptcy and creditors' rights, partnership disputes, commercial foreclosures, contract and corporate disputes, and general and professional liability lawsuits. He also has experience in insurance coverage litigation, and jury and non-jury trial practice.
